Foreword

The editors of the Oracle hope that this volume will serve as a pleasant reminder of high school days. They have endeavored to make the work representative of the class as a whole, with short accounts of the various school activities, and with samples of creative writing done by the students. It is particularly opportune at this time to express our sincere appreciation to Miss Bernice L. Caswell, head of the English Department, without whose generous assistance this book could not have been a success.

JOHN BARRY, Editor-in-Chief

“Try, Trust, Triumph”

Ambition is said to be one of the most important factors that help one attain success. The education that we have received at Wakefield High School has prepared us for many of the higher ideals of life, for education has innumerable outlets. However, the degree of success that one reaches in life is due to his determination to succeed.

One of the most famous inscriptions throughout the world is “In God We Trust.” Certainly if the universe has recognized this statement, we, the future citizens of America, should have sincere faith in our fellow men. This spirit would produce a spirit of co-operation. Without co-operation it is almost impossible to found a successful business or establish a congenial social group. Co-operation is a degree of trust that one has in his fellow men.

The words of the motto are arranged in a logical order. As we go on our way in the future, if we keep the class motto in mind, we are sure to feel some amount of triumph.

MARGARET COSTELLO, '38

The Way In

We are all like ships, sailing on the Sea of Life, toward the Land of the Future. As we approach the shore, there is a haze hanging over it for all of us; but for some of us, this haze is a blanketing fog, blotting out the future. As ships, we need a good Captain to guide us through this fog into the Harbor of Success and away from the Rocks of Failure. Your Captains are your elders. Their advice may seem wrong and hard to follow, but these Captains have been through the Storms of Life, and this is but your Maiden Voyage. Remember that although a task may seem difficult at first, no one has ever succeeded without working.

We have chosen for our class motto, the maxim, "Try, Trust, Triumph." Think it over. Try . . . no one can go far without trying. If you go to college, you will need to try in everything; your studies, your athletic activities, and your social affairs. Going to work? No employer wants a person to work for him who is not willing to try. Trust . . . trust in yourself first of all. Know that you are going to win in whatever you do. And trust in your Captains. They will guide you safely through the fog. Triumph . . . the fog has lifted. Clear sailing ahead!

MARGERY TYLER, '38

"Try, Trust, Triumph"

The Class of 1938 has chosen the motto, "Try, Trust, Triumph", as a standard to follow not only in high school, but in later trials and accomplishments. We have tried to reach the highest goal possible. This goal constitutes the foundation of business and social interests which, in the future, will require our opinions and decisions on difficult matters. The saying, "If at first you don't succeed, try, try again", is certainly familiar to all of us. Nobody is able to obtain success without some failures. Nobody is able to accomplish much without a quiet time for thought. Nobody is able to succeed without any effort. If we do things to the best of our ability, we can trust that some day we shall reach our particular aim in life. No matter what our future may be, we must all start with the idea that we can obtain nothing valuable without work. Theodore Roosevelt once said that we should share the things which made our interests a success with the problem of our community or nation. We can express this idea in one word—co-operation. We can never triumph as individuals or as a nation unless we try, and trust that we are the builders of a better place in which to live. Let us hope that we, as classmates, will remember this fine motto and will live up to its meaning in whatever country or under whatever circumstances we may find ourselves in later years. Let us make "Try, Trust and Triumph" a reality!

NANCY TWOMBLY, '38

Ave Atque Vale

For four years the Class of 1938 has awaited this day, Graduation. Tomorrow we go out into the world, each to do his own work. As yet many of us do not know what that work will be, but in time we shall all find our own corner. Wakefield High School has given us its best, not only in scholarship, but in inculcating within us the true meaning of sportsmanship and high ideals at all times.

We should succeed in life if we follow our class motto: "Try, Trust, Triumph." Try should give us the ambition to do everything to the utmost of our ability; Trust should promote our faith in God for His goodness; Triumph comes to us if we face our failures and overcome all obstacles with a stout heart. With the encouragement of our Alma Mater, we shall go into the world with our class motto on our lips: "Try, Trust, Triumph."

MARY BURNS, '38

"Eddie" is our Class President and one of the most popular boys in the school. He was quite a star in basketball and track, being captain of the Track Team in 1937, and captain of the Basketball Team in 1938. He may be commended for his ready wit and ever-present sense of humor. We find "Eddie" plans to be a teacher-coach, a profession in which he will be just as well liked as he is at Wakefield High. Good luck "Eddie", we're giving three rousing cheers for your success.

BARBARA M. SMITH

"Smitty"

Burdett College

"Personality plus"—that's our peppy, likable vice president. "Barb", one of the most popular girls in the school, has a wide range of activities. An essential part of the cheerleading group, "Smitty" has also participated in many sports, especially basketball. Known as the best guard we ever had, she kept the opposition on its toes all the time. As a social success, "Smitty" held presidency of the Inter Nos. Needless to say, she is the "Frank"-est girl in the school. "Barb" is heading for Burdett's. Smooth (ie) sailing, "Barb"!

HELENE M. SCHNURBUSH

Honor Pupil

"Sugar"

Secretarial School

Class Secretary (4); Athletic Council (2, 3, 4); Hockey (2, 3, 4); Bowling (2, 3, 4); Basketball (2, 3, 4); Tennis (3, 4); Archery (3); Inter Nos Club (2, 3, 4); Junior Prom Committee; Cheerleader (3, 4); Senior Party Committee; Senior Play Property Committee; Spectator Staff; Yearbook Staff.

Versatility personified—that's "Sugar"! She is one of our most popular girls, "tops" in any sport in which she participates, a dance partner every boy dreams about, and above all, an excellent student. "Sugar's" attractive smile has won her many friendships, particularly that of the star center on our basketball team. With her scholastic ability and pleasing personality, we may be sure that in the future "Sugar" will always be a credit to Wakefield High. Some day we shall probably be saying, "I knew her when—."

EDWARD F. PAWLOWSKI

"Eddie"

Undecided

Senior Class Treasurer; Interclass Basketball (2); Varsity Basketball (3, 4); Interclass Football (3); Senior Play Executive Committee; Senior Play Matron Committee.

"Eddie" is a tall, handsome boy known to everyone in the school, especially "Sugar". He is well liked, and his attractive personality has made him capable of his class office. His stellar playing on the basketball team was the joy of the fans, and in every game Eddie was a definite factor in the success of the team. He was co-operatively active on committees in his Senior year, and his dancing ability is not the least of his achievements. Good luck, "Ed"!

EDWARD ADAMS

"Sparky"

Glee Club (3)
Manager Basketball (2, 3).

Diesel Engineering

Although "Sparky" has not participated to a great extent in school activities, he is popular among his friends for his carefree manner and good-natured attitude. His sophomore and junior years were profitably spent as basketball manager, and we are sure his ability in this position was appreciated. "Sparky's" easy-going disposition is sure to get him ahead in the world. We hope his desire to be an engineer will be fulfilled. Rah, rah, "Sparky"!

EDNA MAY ALLEN

"Eddie"

Sherwood Music School

Glee Club (2, 3, 4); Class Day Pianist (3); String Ensemble (3); Senior Play Pianist (4).

"Eddie" is one of North Ward's more quiet girls. Her extra-curricular activities throughout high school have been confined mostly to music. Edna plans to further her musical ambitions at the Sherwood School of Music, and we are sure that her talent in her chosen field will lead her far. We hope your future will be as bright as were your high school days, "Eddie".

DOROTHY ANDERSON

"Dot"

Manicuring School

Senior Party Committee (4); Basketball Manager (2); Cheerleader (4).

"Dot" is another of the vivacious Greenwoodites. She expertly lives up to her reputation of being a "live-wire", and her ready smile creates a cheerful spot wherever she goes. "Dot's" fame on the dance floor is undeniable. Her active feet have mastered the latest dance steps, and her winning personality attracts many of the opposite sex, as well as the fair damsels. As a manicurist, "Dot" will be an expert.

HAZEL ALMA ANDERSON

"Dolly"

Stenographer

Senior Play Committee.

"Dolly" gives you an idea of her sweet disposition. She is very quiet, but always has a smile for everyone. We are sure that some man will be glad to have Hazel for a secretary. May your boss's son be a lively one. Good luck, "Dolly".

LAURA ANTONIOLI

"Lola"

Stenographer

Inter Nos Club (2); Class Color Committee (3).

In Lincoln Grammar School, "Lola" was one of the most popular members of her class. In Wakefield High, her amiable ways have won her many enduring friendships. We wish you the best of luck as a stenographer, "Lola".

CONSTANCE HELEN APPLIN

"Connie"

Interior Decorator

Field Hockey (2); Senior Play Committee;
Junior Prom Committee.

This is Miss Applin, known to her many friends as "Connie". Wherever there are jolly times, "Connie" is always there. She is one of the peppiest members of our class. "Connie" is always bright and cheerful, and ready to help a "friend in need". She has many fine qualities and wins many friends here and elsewhere. She is going to be an interior decorator, and we know she will be good—especially if we judge by her artistic efforts in the Senior Play.

CHRISTINA ATKINSON

"Tina"

Secretarial School

Field Hockey (3); Basketball (2, 3); Inter Nos
(2); Candy Committee (4); Usher Committee (4).

"Tina" is a quiet girl who has won many friends through her amiable disposition. She has participated in sports and devoted herself to committee work throughout her high-school career. Although she has not lived in Wakefield long, "Tina" is a favorite among her classmates. She studies faithfully and gets excellent results. We all join in wishing you lots of happiness, "Tina". Perhaps you'll be our secretary, yet!

MARJORIE B. AYER

"Marj"

Business College

Girls' Glee Club (2, 3, 4); Inter Nos Club
(2, 3, 4); Senior Play Cast.

"Marj" is one of our more sedate girls, with a charming and friendly manner all her own. She possesses a wonderful disposition, and her genial personality is only one of her many virtues. Aside from being a faithful member of the Glee Club, she has displayed her dramatic talent to good advantage by her part in the Senior Play. We know a girl like "Marj" will make good in the business school that she plans to attend. Anyway, here's hoping!

ARTHUR AYSCOUGH

"Art"

Undecided

Football (1); Basketball (3); Interclass Basketball (1, 2).

"Art" is that tall, blonde fellow who came to us from Montrose. He is an extremely likable chap and is as conscientious as they come. Although he has not taken part in many activities during his four years in high school, his dependability has won popularity. Whatever happens in the future, we may be sure we can depend on "Art".

BRADFORD BAKER

"Brad"

Business

Football (1); Junior Prom Committee.

"Brad" is a happy-go-lucky fellow, originally from the Warren School. He and his pals always create humor wherever they are. "Brad" was an active member of our Junior Prom Committee, and did we make him work! If you really think you like ice cream well enough, "Brad", we surely wish you luck at your new work. Why didn't you try out at W. H. S. for practice? One learns, you know, particularly at the girls' counter!

MARJORIE BALDWIN

"Margie"

Nurse

Glee Club (4).

Margie is a Lynnfield product. She has chosen for her career the nursing profession, and we know that her patients will always find a cheerful, efficient nurse at their service. "Margie" may appear to be of the reserved type, but don't let her deceive you. Although she's apparently quiet in school, she's full of fun outside. French still seems to be a puzzle to her; yet she retains her merry laugh. Good luck in the future, "Margie"!

CHARLES BARROWS

"Schlitz"

Aviation

Football (4).

One of the jolliest boys in school is "Schlitz" Barrows, who has a quip for everybody. His smiling face is a familiar sight in the corridors, and he is always welcomed heartily by students, and not so heartily by teachers who do not appreciate his sense of humor. Although he is not so active socially as many others, his pleasing grin made many friends for him. He is liked by all the Seniors. This fall, "Schlitz" was a candidate for the football team, and although he was not on the first team, he was a staunch guard on the second team. We hope to see you a full-fledged pilot some day, "Schlitz", and we know you will be a first-rate airline executive.

JOHN KEVIN BARRY

"Basher"

Law School

Baseball (1, 2, 3, 4); Football (1); Basketball (1); Inter-class Basketball (2, 3); Inter-class Football (2, 3); Soccer (2, 3, 4); Class Day Usher (3); Senior Play Cast (4); Yearbook Staff (4); Hockey (4).

John was a great favorite at St. Joseph's Parochial School, and he is one of the most popular boys in the class of 1938. He is a noted baseball player, and he championed the cause of baseball before the School Committee and Athletic Association when they were in doubt whether or not to continue baseball in the schools. He plays hockey as well as baseball, and he was a spark plug in the forward line last winter. As a member of the cast in the Senior Play, he portrayed the character of his role skillfully and easily. To climax his brilliant high school career, he was elected Editor-in-Chief of the yearbook, a reward earned by honest effort. John has law school ambitions, and with his silver tongue, we may soon find him among the highest ranking attorneys of tomorrow.

RALPH BARTHELMES

"Slim"

Merchant Marine

Class Motto Committee (4).

"Slim" has been most appropriately named, as those of you who are acquainted with him know. He went to the Lincoln School, where he was just as popular as he is with us. "Slim" has done a commendable job in helping to select our class motto: "Try, Trust, Triumph". In consideration of the fine work that he has done in the Wakefield High School, "Slim" should have no trouble in achieving a high command in the Merchant Marine.

CONSTANCE FERN BEECHER

"Connie"

Massachusetts Arts School

Basketball (2); Bowling (2); Library Council (4); Senior Play Stage Crew (4); Yearbook Staff (4); Archery (4).

"Connie" is a peppy little blonde who comes to us from the North Ward. Her gaiety, good humor, and cheerful chatter have made her very popular during her four years at Wakefield High School. Her talent for drawing is well known, and we are sure she will be a success in her chosen field. We are looking forward to the future, "Connie", when we may say, "We knew you when—!"

ROBERT PAUL BENNETT

"Rubin"

Certified Public Accountant

Hi-Y Club (3, 4).

We haven't heard much from this little fellow since he entered W. H. S., for when he came to us from Montrose, he buckled right down to work. "Rubin" is inclined to be very quiet, but his friends will tell you that he has an observant personality. We predict that "Rubin" will go a long way in his chosen profession. Nothing escapes his eagle eyes; therefore he should be a wonder in accounting.

RUTH M. BILL

"Billy"

Undecided

Bowling (3, 4).

"Billy" is very friendly to everyone, a trait that has made her well liked in Wakefield High. Although she has participated in few of our school activities, we find her bowling at the "Y" very often. "Billy's" plans for the future are as yet undecided, but we are sure she will make a happy choice.

JOSEPH BISSO

"Pinky"

Undecided

"Pinky", who began his education at Franklin Grammar School, is one of the most ambitious members of our class. Eventually he hopes to attend college and fit himself for a political career. Don't form a new party, "Pinky", whatever you do.

WILLIAM JAMES BLANCHARD

"Bud"

"Bud" is one of the Falabella, Groat and Blanchard clan. He has led a busy life for the last four years. "Bud" has been one of Mr. Fanck's most dependable helpers, and his enthusiasm and joviality have made him one of the most popular students of our class. Since "Bud" plans to enter Tufts College, we shall call on him to design our plane. And do we envy your scholastic ability, "Bud"!

JAMES BRADY

"Jim"

New Hampshire University

Football (1, 2, 3, 4); Junior Prom Committee; Senior Play Executive Committee; Senior Play Cast; Yearbook Staff (4).

Where you find the closest haircut, the flashiest bow tie, the loudest socks, and the "plaidest" pants, you can find "Jim" Brady, class clown. "Jim" has been a class favorite from the moment he entered school. His stocky build prompted him to go out for the football team in his freshman year. He was on the varsity squad his sophomore and junior years, and in his Senior year he held down the regular tackle berth. He played hard, charging, "heads-up" football, and fans will always remember the good job he did in the Winthrop game. He stole the Senior Play with his rollicking portrayal of "Fat-tie", which kept the audience laughing every minute that he was on stage. If you carry that sunny disposition of yours through life, Jim, you will be an assured success.

FRANCES ANNE BROWN

"Fran"

Hairdressing School

Candy Committee (4).

Although "Fran" may seem to be a quiet girl, she has a keen sense of humor, a gift which makes her very popular among her friends. She plans to be a beautician, and we feel sure that with her ability and personality she will be very successful.

ROGER KIMBALL BURKE

"Rog"

Springfield College

Here we have, from Greenwood, one of the most popular boys in our class. "Rog" has chosen Springfield College in which to continue his gymnastic work. He has fascinated many a person by his straightness and gracefulness in performing. Not content with excelling in athletics, he has made a place for himself as a leader among the boys. "Rog" is always ready for good fun or work.

MARY ELIZABETH BURNS

"Burnsie"

Business College

Field Hockey (2, 3); Glee Club (2, 3, 4); Archery (3); Tennis (3); Homeroom Basketball (3); Dean's Office (4); Inter Nos (4); Senior Play Property Committee; Senior Play Candy Committee; Senior Play Usher; Yearbook Staff (4).

"Burnsie" has been one of the most active girls in our class, as well as one of the jolliest. Her sparkling personality endears her to all. Those who know her are kept in constant laughter by her witty remarks. Mary has a serious side, too, and you will always find her to be a true, dependable friend.

EDWARD CHARLES CALLAN

"Red"

College

Band (1, 2, 3); Baseball (2, 3); Hockey (4); Class Day Usher; Senior Play Usher; Football (1).

The many activities in which "Red" has participated during these last four years have certainly kept him busy. But he is so enterprising that he has a paper route besides. "Red" is a member of our newly-formed hockey team. He was instrumental in securing its acceptance as a school sport. In spite of his crowded schedule, "Red" has done very well in his studies. Such a conscientious lad will surely go to the top of whatever profession he chooses.

GARDNER E. CAMPBELL, Jr.

"Soupie"

Oxford Business School

Hi-Y Club (2, 3, 4); Hi-Y Spectator Staff (4);
Junior Prom Committee (3); Publicity Committee
(4).

"Soupie" hails from the North Ward. His fun-loving nature makes him a favorite among his friends. Although his interest seems to be out of town, he has participated in many school activities. We know his future at Oxford Business School will be a bright one, and we unite in wishing him much luck and happiness there.

SALVATORE J. CANINO

"Sal"

College

Track (2); Orchestra (2).

"Sal" is a rather shy boy who came to us from the Lincoln School. He has been one of the quietest members of our class, but he has a subtle humor. We understand that "Sal" is talented as a musician, and we are sure that in later life we shall hear from him.

ROBERT G. CARLEY

"Rabbit"

Undecided

"Rabbit", another Greenwood alumnus, has not participated in many of our school activities. Nevertheless, he has been constantly among us. His excellent disposition has won him many friends in and out of school. Undecided as he may be, he little needs our wish of success and happiness.

MAURICE O. CARTER, Jr.

"Moe"

Business School

Glee Club (2, 3, 4); Interclass Basketball (3); Interclass Baseball (3).

"Moe", although quiet, is a popular student with a cheery word for everyone. "Moe" is planning to attend a business school next fall, and, with his business efficiency, he will find suitable prospects for the future.

GEORGE CASPER

"Casp"

Medical School

Glee Club (1, 2, 4).

PAUL CHAMPAGNE

"Shankie"

Business School

From the day "Shankie" entered school, we have heard more and more about him as well as from him. "Shankie" is one who will have a good time wherever he is. We owe a lot of fun and success to him, for his smile and good nature make him popular with everyone—especially the girls. "Shankie" has not been active in sports, but once he is on a dance floor, all eyes are turned toward him. Your four years have been very successful, "Shankie", and if that smile sticks, you have a promising future.

HOWARD KELLOWAY CHRISTIE

"Booty"

Maryland State College

Glee Club (1, 2, 3, 4); Interclass Football (2);
Basketball (2); Interclass Basketball (3, 4);
Intramural Baseball (2, 3, 4).

Howard, though diminutive in stature, has a mammoth personality, and we are proud to be among his many friends. As is the custom with the Greenwood boys, he has been active in athletics, and there have been few interclass activities which have not drawn his interests. His agreeable nature assures us that he will make many friends in college, and his ability tells us that he will succeed there.

CHARLES CICCARELLA

"Chooch"

Undecided

Senior Play Stage Staff; Class Motto Committee
(3).

"Charlie", from the Lincoln School, is well liked by his classmates. He is especially noted for his new ideas and arguments on old subjects. Although he is as yet undecided as to what his future will be, we wish him all kinds of luck. In fact, we shall miss you, "Charlie".

CORTLANDT CLARKE

"Basher"

Brown University

Football (1, 2); Hi-Y Club (3, 4); Lunchroom (4); Senior Party Committee (4).

The Warren School sent us a well-appreciated package when it sent us "Basher". He was one of the committee that worked so hard to make our Senior dance one of the best. Cortlandt is also seen a great deal behind a counter, not only in the lunchroom but in one of our local stores. He "Ames" to please. "Basher" intends to study at Brown University, and some day we shall be able to say, "I knew him when—".

HOLLY COBB

"Cobbie"

Music

Glee Club (2, 3, 4); Basketball (2); Inter Nos Club (2); Amateur Shows (1, 2).

A cheery giggle, a welcome smile, and here is "Cobbie", one of the music lovers of our class. "Cobbie" loves to sing, as one can see by her record, not only in the Glee Club, but also in amateur shows. Holly has made such a promising start that she plans to further her musical career. And yes, she's interested in radio, too. Here's wishing success to one of our future opera singers. Keep singing, "Cobbie".

EDNA MAE COLBY

Honor Pupil

University of Maine

"Ed"

Although Edna hails from Malden High School, she has entered into the fun of the Greenwood group and made herself well-liked. She has proved herself a good student and we can all profit from her example. The University of Maine is lucky, "Ed".

ALICE COLDWELL

Honor Pupil

Burdett College

"Al"

Tennis (3, 4).

"Al" is the Lynnfield wizard who is the wonder of her class. Versatile in her studies, she is as good in history as she is in mathematics and science. We know that she will be successful. Burdett should prove valuable to one of her ability.

ROBERT COOK

Honor Pupil

"Cookie"

Bentley School of Accounting

Ring Committee (3).

"Cookie" came to us from the Lincoln School. Although he has not participated in a great number of activities, he is never alone, nor is he lacking in fun. "Cookie" has always been loyal to his class, and we know that at Bentley he will be successful. Good luck to you, "Cookie"!

CAROLINE COSMAN

"Cossy"

Secretary

Basketball (2, 3, 4); Hockey (3, 4); Ring Committee (3); Baseball (3).

"Cossy", a graduate of the Franklin School, is an invaluable basketball player. Hockey, also, has consumed "Cossy's" interest. Her co-operation and loyalty to her teammates in sports have been responsible for her large circle of friends, with her pleasing disposition and agreeable manner. Being an apt student of shorthand and typewriting, we are sure "Cossy" will make good in the secretarial school for which she is heading.

MARIE MILLIE COSTA

"Dimples"

Opera Star

Glee Club (2, 3, 4); Amateur Show (2).

Marie is a happy girl who always has a smile for everyone. She tells us that her one aim and ambition in life is to become an opera star. With your winning personality and talented voice, we are expecting great things from you, Marie. "Peggy" is another of those charming young ladies whose genuine sincerity and unassuming manner endear her to all who have the good fortune of becoming intimately acquainted with her. Lucky pupils may have "Miss Peggy" as their teacher. We think we should like to join them and learn our A B C's again.

JOHN GALVIN CRONIN

"Huck"

Preparatory School

Football (1, 2, 3, 4); Baseball (1); Junior Class
Color Committee (3); Senior Play Stage Crew
(4); Interclass Basketball (2, 3, 4).

"Huck" is one of our most treasured friends. His carefree smile and dancing feet have wended their way into the hearts of all his classmates. During his four years with us, "Huck" has shown much interest in sports, especially football. Although he was not one of our great "eleven", his dependable playing helped Wakefield in holding its own during the football season and won the respect and admiration of the spectators. Besides sports, "Huck" has been an active committee worker. Let's hope his future at "prep" holds much happiness for him.

LEO DALEY

"Weekly"

Undecided

Glee Club (1, 2, 3, 4).

Leo is such a quiet fellow that you would hardly know he was in class—that is, unless you got that warm, cheerful greeting he is capable of extending. He has been a diligent worker and is, indeed, an asset to our class. And to top it all, he is an excellent singer.

MARGARET DALEY

"Peggy"

Business School

Baseball (2); Interclass Basketball (3); Senior Play Wardrobe Committee.

He has been a valuable asset to our track and cross country teams. Let this be a notice to "Bob" that we hope and expect to hear of his even greater success at the University of New Hampshire.

Golf (2); Track (3, 4); Skiing (4); Senior Play Wardrobe Committee; Tennis (3, 4); Archery (3); Inter Nos (2, 3, 4); Yearbook Staff (4).

"Ginny" is an unusually good sport. From Lynnfield Centre Grammar School, she came to Wakefield High, but she prefers her acquaintances in her home town. She is just the type that relishes sports. At first, one would believe her to be quiet, but after being with her for a short time, she proves herself to be the life of the party. Like her father, Virginia takes a great interest in drawing. Her personality and talent foretell a bright future.

MARY ANN LAZZARO

"Annie"

Secretarial School

Senior Play Candy Committee; Basketball (1); Glee Club (1).

Mary is the pretty dark-haired girl who came to us from the Woodville School four years ago. She is one of the most fashionable girls in the Class of 1938. Her natural curly hair has been a constant source of admiration to her classmates. We are certain that she will become a most efficient secretary and be of great assistance to the lucky man who may employ her. Here's wishing you success, Mary!

May your victories in life be as pleasant and as numerous as those you have attained on the cinders, George.

EDNA MARY LEDUC

"Eddie"

Undecided

Basketball (2); Ring Committee (3); Wardrobe Committee (4); Glee Club (4).

"Ginny" is another miss from that unexplored wilderness called Greenwood. During her high school career she has been interested in athletics as well as in her studies. We all hope that her ambition to be a hairdresser will be realized. "Ginny's" care-free manner and pleasant smile have won the friendship of all of her fellow-students. Her pep and vigor are undeniably her most popular traits. Among "Ginny's" qualities there is one weakness: she seems always t'eddy (Teddy) around as if in a daze. Nevertheless, we all agree that "Ginny" will find success wherever she goes.

MADELINE MUSE

"Mousie"

Madeline, more familiarly known to her classmates as "Mousie" can be characterized by her name. She makes just about as much noise as a mouse. Neither do we see much of her in Wakefield, for her interests seem to center around a certain Stonham lad. Since "Mousie's" scholastic ability is among the best, we know she'll be a very efficient secretary.

Possessing a pleasing personality, "Queenie" has those charms that attract members of the opposite sex. When the Hurd School sent us "Bubone", they surely didn't realize what they were losing. Yet, Bubone was headed for something higher; so of course, he came to lend his companionship to us. "Bubone" is one of those true "swingsters" you read so much about. The Band has had him for four years, but watch the orchestra when he plays, and beware of "Sugar Blues". Four years ago, the Hurd School sent us a tall, vivacious, and pretty young lady answering to the name of "Nat". She is one of the leaders of the class. "Nat" has "Educated Feet" and, for that reason is always seen at the school dances "truckin' on down." Natalie plans to go to the Lesley School and major in dietetics. We wish you luck, "Nat".

"Mary" comes from that Greenwood family which is famous for its talented actors and actresses. "Mary" kept up the Ryan traditions by being cast in our Senior Play and doing an excellent piece of work. She "went literary" this year, too, and labored diligently on the Hi-Y Spectator Staff. Without Mary's sunny disposition and untiring wit, life would indeed be monotonous for her classmates and the teachers.

MARY L. SAUNDERS

ADA MAUDE SCHIEFISCH

Moreover, he has assisted Mr. Panck by giving lessons to beginners. His school work has been excellent, and we hope it will continue to be so at Trinity College. If we may venture to prophesy, we think that "Bob" will be famous some day.

ALICE HAMBLEN SEDGLEY

"Wally", that "Lovely Lady from Lynnfield", has certainly given the Wakefield lads and lasses a favorable impression of the "woods of Lynnfield". Her stunning looks, combined with her excellent taste in clothes, has placed her high among the fashionable young misses of our class. Her charming personality and sincere understanding have made her a favorite everywhere. Our "Keyhole" reporter has this exclusive bit of information that "Wally" was last seen at the Stoneham Zoo, gazing rapturously at the "Monk"ey. Aha, "Wally"!

Such is our recommendation to whatever college he may choose.

WILLIAM FRANKLIN SPARKS

Long and lanky, that's "Bill"—one of the best liked members of his class. He came to us from the Warren School and has played a prominent part in school activities, especially during his Senior year, when he distinguished himself as one of our most valuable basketball players. "Bill" is one of the best-looking boys in our senior class and has captured more than one of the feminine hearts. You can always find "Bill" "Dodge"ing around Lynnfield. If he concentrates on his profession as he has certain other things, we know he'll surely succeed. All joking aside, "Bill" is a great pal!

ANNE LOUISE STANISKI

"Annie"

"Annie's" sole ambition is to become a hairdresser, and most of her time is spent in preparing for her chosen vocation. Although "Annie" is quiet in school, she is active and joyful outside. "Phyl" has participated in many of our school activities, among them being the Senior Play. "Phyl" often reads as many as five books a week. This pet diversion is probably based on the fact that a book has lots of "Pages". "Phyl's" congenial nature will win her many friends at Lesley.

DOROTHY VIRGINIA SURETTE

"Dot"

Stenography

Glee Club (2); Baseball (3); Bowling (4); Senior Play.

"Dot" is just another proof of the old saying that good things come in small packages. This petite brunette has made herself very well liked these past four years, and we certainly congratulate the lucky business man whose secretary she will become.

EDITH MARGARET TAYLOR

"Edie"

Hairdresser

"Edie" joined us after attending the Lincoln Grammar School. She has led rather a quiet life during high school; therefore we have not been able to know her as we should like to. "Edie" intends to study hairdressing. From the appearance of her own hair, we know that she is well qualified to do this kind of work. Good luck, "Edie".

NORMA TEAGUE

"Norm"

Lesley School

Basketball (2); Inter Nos Club (2, 3, 4); Corresponding Secretary, Inter Nos (4); Archery (3); Senior Play Wardrobe Chairman (4).

Norma, one of our most popular Senior girls, has a ready smile for everyone. She has displayed much interest in the Inter Nos Club and school sports. It takes something like a little curl standing on end on the top of someone's head, to put "Norm" in gales of laughter. Norma plans to be a dietician, and we all wish her the best of luck. We know that her formula will always be "Keep Smiling."

MARY LUCY TECCE

"Teccie"

Boston City Hospital

Basketball (1, 2, 3); Tennis (3); Senior Party Committee.

Jolly little Mary, known to her closest friends as "Teccie", will be a great addition to any hospital, for she hopes to be a nurse. Always smiling, Mary is one of those people you can't help liking. Because she works outside school, Mary has little time for school activities except basketball, a sport in which she starred. Brother to our football center, "Gus", Mary is an expert dancer. As a nurse, she has our vote.

MARJORY THISTLE

"Margie"

Burroughs Machine School

Glee Club (2); Chairman Senior Play Property Committee.

Marjory, who moved here from Woburn in her sophomore year, has a quiet manner of doing things, but one can be assured of steady, thorough work if "Margie" does the job. She handled the Senior Play Property Committee easily and efficiently. Her capability will aid her greatly in carrying out her future plans.

JOHN THOMPSON

"Johnny"

Forestry

The Greenwood School sent John to us. This boy loves to tramp through the woods, he also enjoys fishing. Although he has not participated in many school activities, he has made many friends in school. We think you will make a good forester, John, and may your sylvan adventures be successful.

WILLIAM LEDD THOMPSON, JR.

"Billy"

Harvard

Cross Country (2, 3, 4); Band (1, 2, 3, 4).

From Greenwood comes smiling "Billy" Thompson, whose sparkling eyes betray the keen sense of humor which lies behind them. Although he is of slight stature, this boy has a pair of legs which have carried him over hill and dale with the cross country team for three years. He is a natural runner and performs with the smoothness which identifies a good runner. He was elected co-captain of the cross country team during his last year. For four years he has been a member of the band, and a familiar sight playing at football games. He leaves school with a sunny disposition and a sense of optimism which ought to overcome any obstacles which may confront him in life.

CONCETTO TINE

"See"

Undecided

Varsity Football (2, 4).

Although he is not loquacious, "See" is one of the friendliest boys in school. He is the kind that is a true friend through thick and thin, and not at all of the fair weather variety. In his sophomore year he went out for football and made the squad; again in his Senior year he was a candidate. Because of his muscular build, he developed into one of the best tackles on the second team and played sterling football throughout the entire season. His fine character of play was recognized and he received the numerals which he justly deserved. We understand that you are undecided about your choice of a life work, "See", but if you keep at it, we know that Lady Luck will smile upon you.

CATHERINE M. TITUS

"Kay" came to Wakefield High School from Greenwood. She is small in stature, but she rates big with all who know her. "Kay" is always good-natured and willing to help her classmates. Wherever he goes and whatever he does, his cheery disposition and pleasing personality will remain in our minds. May your present success ever follow you, "Sandy".

GEORGE EDWARD TREMBLAY

"G. E."

Navigation School

Glee Club (3, 4).

Edward is the kind of fellow who is quiet in a crowd, but when you know him, he is a likable chap. His mind is always on boats of all kinds, especially steamboats, and if he can navigate a boat as well as he can draw one, he will be another successful Greenwood man from W. H. S. Well, "G. E.", we hope that some day we'll sail across the ocean blue in one of the "G. E. T. Steamship Line's" boats.

The Senior Play

"Life Begins at Sixteen", a comedy in three acts by Hilda Manning, was presented by members of the Senior Class, Friday evening, December 10, 1937, in the High School Auditorium, under the direction of Miss Barbara Gerry.

Mrs. Hollis, mother of the sixteen-year-old twins, Paul and Frannie, had won a radio contest for naming a beauty soap. The reward was a trip to Havana for herself and her husband. During their absence, Paul caused the Hollis Shoe Store to "go modern", with an orchestra, living models, handbills, and so on. He set out to prove that the fiance of his nineteen-year-old sister, Marjorie, was a racketeer. The "Secret Seven", a society of sixteen-year-olds, of which Paul was president, assisted him in his scheme.

The players were all very natural, and each one was well suited to his part.

The play was probably the most successful one to date, and the auditorium was filled to capacity. Much praise may be given to Miss Gerry, the efficient director.

Boys' Glee Club

One could not wish to hear a finer group of young men's voices than those of the Wakefield High School Boys' Glee Club. Under the efficient direction of Mr. Arthur Fulton, these boys have become proficient in the art of singing. Mr. Fulton spends two afternoons every week in rehearsing the senior and junior groups, comprising approximately fifty boys.

In December, a concert was given at Christmas with the Girls' Glee Club; in February, the club sang at a meeting of the Kosmos Club and in May, the combined Boys' and Girls' Clubs presented a Gilbert and Sullivan operetta, "Trial by Jury", a dramatic cantata in one act.

To Mr. Fulton we extend our best wishes for another successful year.

Girls' Glee Club

The first public performance of the glee clubs this year was the annual Christmas concert, during which several members of the Class of 1938 were featured as soloists: Holly Cobb, Mildred Halliday and Marjorie Wells, president of the Senior Club. Miss Marjorie Pedersen, harpist, of New York City, was the guest artist at both the assembly given in the morning for the upper classmen and at the evening concert. The use of the electric "Orgatron", played by Miss Edna Parks, our new director, as accompaniment for the combined choruses—particularly the excerpts from the Messiah—helped to make this the best concert yet given by the four singing organizations of the high school.

The combined glee clubs plan to produce an operetta some time in May. The cast has not been announced at this date, but much competition promises success for the venture.

The officers are as follows:

President—MARJORIE WELLS
Vice-President—LILLIAN THRUSH
Secretary—FANNY HOVEY
Treasurer—FANNY HOVEY
Librarians—{ NORMA BOYCE

Hi-Y Spectator Staff

The Hi-Y Spectator had another banner year in that it provided the students as well as the faculty, many moments of cheerfulness and gay laughter each Friday morning. Frank A. Tredinnick as Editor-in-Chief has shown that he has a real future in journalism. The entire staff at all times did its best to give just what its readers wanted. The advertising was, on the whole, a trifle better this year, and it is the hope of the Staff Members that the public has enjoyed reading the paper as much as the former liked writing this year's Spectator. May its memories linger on!

Inter Nos Club 1937-1938

This year has proved to be another successful one added to the history of the Inter Nos Club, under the helpful direction of Miss Helen Gilmore. The program for the school year was as follows:

At the October meeting, Mrs. Frank Tredinnick was the speaker. This meeting was under the auspices of the Inter Nos Board. The secretary was in charge of the November meeting, at which the candlelight ceremony was performed. Under the direction of the Senior Directors, moving pictures were shown, and a buffet tea was served at the December meeting. In January the treasurer, as chairman, showed enjoyable moving pictures. The outstanding event of the year took place on February 9, when we gathered with our guests in the gymnasium for our annual tea dance, with Mrs. Harold Miles and Mrs. Frank Smith as matrons. The Junior Directors were in charge of the March meeting, to which our mothers were invited. On this occasion we were entertained by a demonstration of sandwich making. The corresponding secretary supervised the April meeting, and she arranged a short play. In May, the members of the Hi-Y Club were guests at our annual entertainment and tea. The final business meeting was held in June under the supervision of the Sophomore Directors. The annual reports were read and the election of officers held. This meeting brought to a close the tenth year of the Inter Nos Club in the Wakefield High School.

The Football Team

The Wakefield High School football team of 1937, coached by William D. Healey, and captained by John Guttadauro, had a most successful season. Its record of winning seven games and losing but two is one of which it can be justly proud. The attendance at the games was remarkable, and those who did attend deserve to share in the team's success. After losing to Malden, Wakefield was victorious over Amesbury, Swampscott, Woburn, Watertown, and Winthrop. Its hopes were high, but it was defeated by a better Melrose team. This did not alter Wakefield's course, and the team proceeded to win from Reading, and to finish the season with a great victory over Cambridge Latin.

Basketball — 1938

Wakefield's 1938 season has been the best of the last four years. Coach Homer M. Shellenberger developed a fine team which was worthy of any opponents. The new basketball rules adopted this year have made a larger first team necessary. Wakefield produced a good ten-man first squad, four members of which will be able to play for Wakefield again next year.

Proof of the quality of this team lies in its enviable record. The first team won ten games and lost six. It finished the season in a tie for third place in the Mystic Valley League. The second team won ten games and lost five.

There were only four letter men from last year's squad. These were Captain Edward Habermann, Louis Climo, John Guttadauro and Robert Doucette. The other members of the first team were Edward Pawlowski, John Conroy, Winsor Beebe, Arnold Cochran, Charles McManuis and Thomas Conroy, an all-time high scorer for Wakefield High School.

Boys' Band

This year, Wakefield High has had a band of which it can justly be proud. Its splendid performances at football and basketball games, plus marching ability, have earned many compliments from private citizens. The band in its familiar red and white uniforms, led by the drum major, Fred Herbolzheimer, Jr., should create a feeling of pride in every high-school student.

Although few people realize the fact, Wakefield is the sole town for miles around that has only boys in its band. Other bands have to depend on girls to sustain their memberships, but Wakefield is lucky in having enough musically-minded young men. In this year's band there are nine clarinets, fourteen cornets and trumpets, two saxophones, three tubas, six trombones, two altos, three baritones, six drums, and one piccolo. This makes it the largest band Wakefield High School has ever had.

A vote of thanks is given by all the band members to Mr. Joseph Fanck, the director. Mr. Fanck has worked long and hard rehearsing the band as a whole, and drilling the separate sections.

The band this year has been fortunate also in having Lieutenant Richard B. Dolbeare of the Richardson Light Guard to give valuable marching information.

In June, Mr. Fanck loses most of his experienced players by graduation, but we know that he will find more good material among his other players. It is our sincere wish that next year he may have another successful band.

Cheerleaders

With unusual co-operation from the stands, the following nine fairest girls and two of our chosen boys spurred the very successful football team on to victory:

WILLIAM MEUSE, '38
ARNOLD COCHRAN, '39
HELENE SCHNURBUSH, '38
BARBARA SMITH, '38
DOROTHY ANDERSON, '38

BETTY KIMBALL, '38
BETSY GRIFFITHS, '38
BETTY COX, '39
BARBARA TWITCHELL, '39
ANITA MONGE, '39

The substitutes were Grethel Preble, '38; Helen Mew, '38; James Guttadauro, '38.

The entire group attended all the games. The girls, with their flaming red skirts, white sweaters, and respective letters, and the boys with their white flannels and maroon sweaters, gave a fine exhibition at each game. The cheer leaders' presence with the band received great commendation from the packed stands, no doubt, because of their trim and snappy appearance. It will be a hard job to surpass this group in the future.

Orchestra

The Wakefield High School Orchestra rehearsals were resumed, last spring, after a period of inactivity of almost a year. Since that time, the orchestra has been practicing faithfully every week under the direction of Mr. Joseph Fanck. Although the group did not play so often as it would have liked, it furnished music for the Senior Play, appeared at an assembly, and played at the spring concerts. Among the most talented members are our classmates: Robert Schuman, who has been one of the mainstays of the band and orchestra; Ed Loughlin, who graced with equal success the football field and the orchestral chair; and Peter Jencsolik, with his sweet-toned trumpet and sunny smile.

The Library Service Club

This is a group newly organized this year, made up, for the most part, of a representative from each home room. The members give at least one period a week to assisting in the school library. During that period, the pupil has full charge of the desk, charging and discharging books, "timing" the library slips, checking new magazines, and counting the previous day's circulation. Special assignments by teachers are noted and reported to the librarian, that books on those subjects may be restricted to library use.

The club members, who, by the way, must meet certain requirements in scholarship and deportment, have visited other school libraries, thus broadening their ideas on the value of this branch of school work.

Hockey

This year, Wakefield High School re-organized hockey as a sport, and the boys did the rest. They certainly worked hard in order that future years might find Wakefield with the other Greater Boston schools in the hockey realm. Bad weather conditions and the inability of the coach to offer much of his time were serious handicaps. The team played seven games, winning only three, but made a fine showing for the first year.

The leading scorers in rank were "Ken" Whipling, "Bernie" McDonald, and John Barry; other boys who also turned in grand work on the squad were Charles Confalone, Frank Spang, "Whacker" MacDonald, "Bubone" Reed, "Red Dog" MacKenna, D. McKay, John Spang, "Ed" Callan and Gillie Oakes. These boys really worked hard to bring hockey to Wakefield, and future high school teams will do well if they can follow this squad's promising example.

Field Hockey

For several years field hockey has been an organized fall sport for the girls at Wakefield High. Under the direction of our new gymnasium teacher, Miss Nichols, much progress has been made with the team.

Playing their first field hockey game with Stoneham, the girls lost by the small margin of one goal, to a more experienced team. Their spirited play and defense work spoke well for their efforts. Miss Nichols worked hard to make a real team and to keep field hockey going as an extra-curricular activity. Much interest was shown in the team, which consisted of girls from sophomore to senior classes, who were picked to represent their school as a field hockey team.

The first squad consisted of fourteen girls:

B. Davis, Guinta, rw; J. Rasmusson, ri; B. Florence, cf; H. Schnurbush, li; G. Maher, E. Peterson, F. Jillett, lw; N. Butler, rh; P. Dower, ch; C. Miles (Capt.), lh; C. Cosman, rf; K. Merrill, lf; S. Marshall, g.

Baseball

Since the 1938 baseball picture and record will not be available until after the required date for publication, we have decided to include a picture and an account of the preceding year's team in the yearbook. This is a particularly opportune time to do so, since the majority of the players on last year's squad are members of the Class of 1938.

After a somewhat hectic and bitter struggle, interested players finally outlined a plan for baseball at Wakefield High School. As you undoubtedly recall, Winthrop and Melrose precipitated the abandonment of the Mystic Valley League, of which Wakefield was a member.

The first month of the season was spent in intra-mural league competition. After a comparatively successful schedule, Coach Shellenberger selected a varsity group that rang up the best record in recent years—four victories against five defeats.

All nine games were played in less than a month, with only two pitchers to rely upon; consequently, down the home stretch, teams that Wakefield once defeated easily, took advantage of her weakness. Among our defeats were two which were no disgrace—one against the undefeated Watertown nine; the other, a close loss at Melrose, whose powerful outfit took both Malden and Everett in stride. Truly one of the best schoolboy teams was deprived of a chance to shine when Melrose all but dropped baseball for good.

John Barry, whose brother Bert won the Mystic Valley League batting championship a few years back, headed the high school batters at or above .400 during the greater part of the season. As a unit, the team did not hit so well, but fielded the best of any club since 1930.

Since most of the boys on last year's team will be back, and the material coming up from the freshman team appears promising, the Wakefield High School baseball team under Captain-elect Louis Quinzio should have a very successful season.

Dance Collegiate

The Senior Class of Wakefield High School held its annual party on January 29 in the school gymnasium. The theme for the party was that of a collegiate dance, with banners of many colleges and schools hung on the walls. Multi-colored streamers covered the lights and were extended from all corners of the hall.

The grand march was led by President Edward Habermann with Priscilla Fisher as his partner. The Vice-president, Barbara Smith, was next in line, escorted by Frank Spang. Then came the Class Treasurer, Edward Pawlowski, who accompanied the Class Secretary, Helene Schnurbush.

Favors were distributed during the fifth dance. Later in the evening, a spot dance was won by Iva Andrews and Donald Hill.

During intermission the dancers were entertained by Paul Lally, a classmate, who played the piano and whistled many popular songs.

In the matrons' corner were Mrs. Herman Habermann, Mrs. Frank A. Smith and Miss Margaret Ryan, Miss Alice Ryan and Miss Helen Gilmore of the Faculty.

The committee in charge included the officers and June Mosher, Robert Schuman, Dorothy Anderson, Marguerite Dinan, Flora Eldridge, Carrie Gray, Marguerite Harper, Mona Kent, Virginia Lloyd, Alice Sedgley, Mary Tecce, Paul Champagne, Cortlandt Clarke, Henry Holden, Maurice Morin, Gilbert Oakes, Robert Pohl, John Riley, Theodore Robbins and Laurence Wade.

Class History

Rather bewildered by the maze of rooms, innumerable rules, and so many fellow classmates, on September 5, 1934, our class embarked upon its voyage of higher education. We were the largest class ever to enter the high school—numbering approximately 350—a fact which made us feel that our position in the school was of no little importance. After a few weeks we became accustomed to the routine of high school life, and tried hard to master our difficult programs. Many of our number soon showed excellent results of their endeavors.

Those on the freshman honor roll for the year were: Elizabeth Fanck, Katherine Nutt, Helene Schnurbush, John Warner, John Barry, Alice Coldwell, Robert Cook, Kenneth Grout, Frederick Johnson, Mona Kent, Virginia Lambert, Katherine Miller, Joseph O'Toole, Nancy Twombly, and Kenneth Whipling.

One activity in which we were the first to participate was the Boston HERALD spelling contest. Hugh Morgan, victorious over our whole freshman class, went to Boston to compete.

Because of the double session, it was possible for the freshmen to have a separate football team and to receive their training and practice during the morning hours. This team, with John Guttadauro as quarterback, remained undefeated throughout the year.

Under the competent direction of Miss Bent and Mr. Shellenberger, the Athletic Council sponsored an entertainment which we called "Amateur Night", during our first year. Our class was represented by the following: Alma MacGregor, Mary Ryan, Holly Cobb, and Dorothy Surette.

These incidents were the most important of the freshman year, which closed on June 21, 1935.

On September 4, 1935, we entered as sophomores. As the term advanced, members of our class took part in many school activities. Elizabeth Fanck and Betty Kimball were the sophomore directors on the Inter Nos Board. Barbara Smith and Helene Schnurbush represented the class in the Girls' Athletic Council. Many sophomore girls joined the Girls' Glee Club, which was organized by Miss Vivian Dix.

Those on the honor roll were: Elizabeth Fanck, Constance Beecher, Roger Burke, Alice Coldwell, Donald Hill, Virginia Lambert, Woodrow Millet, Katherine Nutt, Hilda Oster, Helene Schnurbush, John Warner, and Kenneth Whipling.

The sophomores on the football squad were: John Guttadauro, Edward Maloney, Edward Habermann, James Brady, Kenneth Whipling, James Guttadauro, and Joseph DeFelice. Many of the girls participated in field hockey and basketball. Rosina Howard filled the position of manager of field hockey; Helene Schnurbush was the basketball captain, and Dorothy Anderson the manager.

The Athletic Council again gave an "Amateur Night", and the program included several of our class: Dorothy Surette, Holly Cobb, Catherine MacGillivray, and Dorothy Riley.

The months, filled with interesting events and activities, passed all too swiftly, and on June 19, 1936, W. H. S. closed its doors upon our sophomore year.

On September 9, after two short months of vacation, we found ourselves back in school ready to start the junior year. Our home rooms were assigned, and we were ready for another year of hard, intensive study.

It was not long before our class had organized teams in all the sports, with football, of course, taking the lead. Those who took an active part in this sport were: James Brady, Joseph DeFelice, Joseph Foley, John Guttadauro, Herman Habermann, Melvin Levine, Edmond Loughlin, Frank Martino, William Meuse, Frank Spang, Augustine Tecce, Patrick Walsh, John Cronin, Ralph Johnson, George Kimball, Edward Maloney, John Woodhull, Charles Barrows, Edward Habermann, Joseph Laurino, and Robert Pohl.

Our track and cross country teams were comprised of Roger Burke, James Guttadauro, Edward Habermann, Robert King, George Leach, and John Whitford. They made good records at the meets.

John Cronin, Gilbert Oakes, and George Kimball, although only juniors, joined the golf team and helped to win many games.

During our last three years of high school the glee clubs, under the supervision of Mr. Fulton and Miss Dix, and the band, under the supervision of Mr. Fanck, progressed rapidly.

The girls showed much interest in field hockey under the direction of Miss Shepherd. They also took part in basketball and in bowling.

The girls also became active in the Inter Nos Club. Those who so ably helped to carry on the work were: Treasurer, Nancy Twombly; Corresponding Secretary, Grethel Preble; and Junior Directors, Barbara Smith and Eleanor O'Connell.

During the year, Miss Katherine Nichols and Miss Dorothy Shepherd were appointed to replace Miss Marjorie Bent as physical instructor of the girls. Miss Louise Sheldon was appointed librarian to fill the vacancy left by Miss Mildred Moore.

At our first class meeting, the motto "Try, Trust, Triumph" was chosen by the Class of 1938. At the same time we decided upon black and silver out of the many color combinations that were suggested.

The Junior Class officers were: President, Donald Miles; Vice President, Barbara Smith; Secretary, Mildred Paulson; and Treasurer, William Thompson.

On April 10, 1937, the Class of 1938 held its first dance, the Junior Prom; or, as it was called, "The Dutch Treat." Miss Gilmore and the members of the Junior Prom Committee, by their untiring efforts, made this dance an outstanding event of the year. The money made was put aside for a part of the graduation expenses.

The following juniors were on the honor roll: Elizabeth Fanck, Robert Cook, John Woodhull, Katherine Nutt, Frederick Johnson, Kenneth Whipling, Helene Schnurbush, and Virginia Lambert.

On June 25, 1937, our junior year was completed.

On September 8, 1937, the senior class, the largest in many years, gathered to complete its final year of high school education. Early in the fall term, the class elected these officers: President, Edward Habermann; Vice President, Barbara Smith, Secretary, Helene Schnurbush; and Treasurer, Edward Pawlowski.

The Inter Nos Club selected Barbara Smith as President, Grethel Preble as Corresponding Secretary, Betsy Griffiths as Treasurer, and Virginia Wheeler and Betty Kimball as the Senior Directors.

Donald Miles was President of the Hi-Y, but because he left Wakefield High School, Roger Burke was appointed to replace him. The other officers were: Vice President, Frank Spang; Secretary, Frank Tredinnick; and Treasurer, John Warner.

For the first time in many years, the Wakefield High School organized a hockey team. Many of the boys were enthusiastic about this sport, a feeling which resulted in the organization of a good and very successful hockey team. Those who participated were John Barry, Edward Callan, Stephen MacDonald, Donald MacKay, Robert Reed, Frank Spang, Gilbert Oakes, Bernard McDonald, and Kenneth Whipling.

The basketball team was close to championship this year, the following boys helping to make it so: Louis Climo, Joseph DeFelice, William Meuse, Edward Pawlowski, and William Sparks.

Most of the boys who played football last year were in the team again, and with John Guttadauro as captain, had a very good season, winning most of the games, and consequently tying with Melrose for the Mystic Valley League Championship.

The Glee Clubs, under the supervision of Miss Vivian Dix and Mr. Arthur Fulton, have had regular weekly rehearsals. The fine results of the excellent training were evident when parts of the "Messiah" were sung in the Christmas concert; and again when the operetta, "Trial by Jury", and annual spring concert were presented on May 20.

The Senior Play, given by the Class of 1938, was the most successful of the class affairs. All tickets were sold, and the auditorium was crowded with pupils and townspeople, some of whom stood all the evening to see this highlight of the season. Although over 200 pupils, with the aid of the faculty, contributed to the success of the play, only a few were actually seen on the stage. The play was very well presented under the efficient direction of Miss Barbara Gerry. Frank Tredinnick played the lead; the role of a young man who wished to run the household while his parents were away on a vacation. Those who made up the supporting cast were Barbara Smith, Mildred Paulson, Nancy Twombly, Robert King, Betty Kimball, William Dufault, Frank Spang, Betsy Griffiths, John Barry, Dorothy Riley, James Brady, Phyllis Stone, Marianne Ryan, and Marjorie Ayer.

On January 29, 1938, the Senior Party was held in the auditorium of the high school. This dance was the last affair to be held by the Class of 1938, and therefore our last opportunity to earn money for Class Day and Graduation. The committee worked hard, with gratifying results.

In March of this year the speakers for graduation were announced. Elizabeth Fanck received the highest honors, and therefore is valedictorian; Katherine Nutt is salutatorian, and Helene Schnurbush has the third honor part.

As our high school days come to a close, we realize more fully the interpretation of our motto: "Try, Trust, Triumph." May it always remind us of the earnest years at Wakefield High School, and their valuable contribution to our lives.

Will of Class of 1938

LAST WILL AND TESTAMENT OF THE CLASS OF 1938 TO WHOMSOEVER IT MAY CONCERN:

We, the members of the Senior Class of the Wakefield High School, of the Town of Wakefield, of the County of Middlesex, in this great Commonwealth of Massachusetts, being of sound mind and memory, and realizing that the time has come for us to pass out from this institution of learning which has endeared itself to each and all of us, do make, publish, and declare this our last will and testament, in manner and form as follows:

FIRST: As our CLASS GIFT, we give and bequeath a sum of money to be used in purchasing one or more articles which will benefit the pupils of the high school. Said money is to be spent at the discretion of Mr. Peterson and the following members of the Class of 1938 who constitute the Class Gift Committee: Madeline Muse, Lorraine O'Donnell, Catherine Dulong, Olive Muse, Kathleen Dunlea, and Rose Gregoria.

SECOND: To the Faculty of the Wakefield High School, we give and bequeath our gratitude and appreciation for guidance, inspiration, and the imparting of knowledge to us, the Seniors, during our four years in school. Moreover, we especially request that the teachers herein mentioned be remembered specifically with the following:

Mr. Peterson and Mr. Kinder: a Zenith Radio Nurse, so that when they are in the office, they can hear the slightest scolding that a teacher may be giving a pupil and rush to said pupil's assistance.

Mr. Healey: another "Dicey" Conroy.

Miss Margaret Ryan: several extra packages of paper, to be placed in a convenient location for the study pupils who sit in her room, thereby saving them from begging for one sheet.

Miss Macdonald: a pair of dark glasses so that she cannot discover every typewriting error on the poor beginners' papers.

Miss Gleason: a brilliant ornament to adorn her most ultra-modern and stylish coiffure.

Miss Pattee: a life-like portrait of her beautiful Persian cat, Cherie, to be painted by Miss Hirst, and, on completion, to have inscribed beneath the words, "Mon Chat." It is our earnest request that this portrait be hung in Miss Pattee's classroom as a teaching aid for those French scholars who have difficulty in remembering how to spell "cat."

Miss Nichols: a girls' basketball team that can beat Reading.

Mr. Cassano: a practice golf ball that will always make a hole-in-one.

Mr. Fulton: one huge blank book in which to compile a dictionary of his five-syllable words, said dictionary to be used to enlighten those unfortunate pupils who are familiar with nothing but the "vernacular of the street."

Miss Alice Ryan: a much-needed office practice room, together with the latest office practice machines and equipment.

Mr. Gallop and Mr. Preble: a magic mixing set which will do away with any obnoxious gases which, in the past, have frequently escaped and caused a number of most brilliant pupils to be caught napping.

Mr. Antunes: a special pair of eyeglasses so that he will not have to be annoyed with two pairs.

Mr. White: a gavel to be made from the wood of his desk in Room 101, said gavel to serve as a lasting memorial in case he should desert the teaching profession to become Town Manager.

Miss Reed: a sailor hat to wear when she pulls the curtains up and down by the rope, so that she will truly feel—as she so frequently says—that she is “at the mast.”

Mr. Heavens: a new, bright green necktie to replace the faded one he has been wearing for the past ten years on St. Patrick’s Day.

Miss Cowing: a set of French records that can be run at a very slow rate of speed, thereby saving her pupils the necessity of taxing their energy to keep up with her rapid flow of language.

THIRD: To our fellow-classmates whose names are hereinafter mentioned, we give and bequeath in the manner described.

Howard Christie: a bit of artistic ability, so that he can draw a picture of the “girl of his dreams” and carry it about with him, thus saving Howard the necessity of looking for the real thing.

Betty Florance: a ticket to Switzerland where she can try her luck at skiing and tumble down something higher than Mr. Hood, Melrose.

Eva Monegan: an extra year in high school, just in case she should have missed out on anything.

Marie Costa: a mammoth sewing kit for her next demonstration.

James Brady: a few quarters, so he will not have to wear his hair cut so short that he appears scalped.

Dorothy Anderson: a heavy insurance on her Paderewski-like fingers.

Robert Bennett: a good supply of cod liver oil so that he will grow as tall and husky as John Woodhull.

John Barry: the $50,000 dog of the motion picture, “The Awful Truth,” so John will be willing to part company with the dilapidated-looking mongrel he takes around.

Priscilla Fisher: the opportunity to be “The First Lady”, since she has become so accustomed to traveling around with a President.

Martha Greenleaf: fifteen minutes each day to do the Wallace exercises with the radio.

Paul Champagne: some “Goody” curlers so that he can acquire a deep wave in his sleek hair.

Alma MacGregor: some pepper to put on her fingers so that she will not bite her nails.

Gardner Campbell: a trip around the world so that the other fellows in the class will have a chance to see a girl once in a while.

Shirley Simpson: a contract as a “baby star” in the movies.

Thomas Hickey: some baking powder so that he will unfold and pop up and surprise himself.

Paul Lally: a bottle of hair tonic so that his hair will grow long enough to shake when he becomes a great maestro.

Robert Cook: an acre of land in Wakefield Square so that he can park his automobile without bumping into another car.

George Kimball: a pair of knickers and some sporty golf hose which will save him the trouble of constantly rolling up his trousers.

FOURTH: Certain opulent members of the Class of 1938 give and bequeath to certain needy members of the Class of 1939 special gifts as hereinafter set forth:

William Dufault gives his brilliant sales talk to Robert Peabody.

Frank Tredinnick passes on his exceptional vocabulary to any member of the Junior Class able to "take it."

Elizabeth Fanck places her analytical mind at the disposal of Carolyn Miles.

Mary Ryan surrenders her outstanding position on the Spectator to Betty Costello.

John Kane, having no further use for his rattle and other similar toys, generously hands them over to Malcolm Russell.

Jimmie Brady leaves his whiffle to Clifford Peck so that Clifford may play the dirge for the Class of 1939.

Christina Atkinson offers her preciseness to "Ginger" Schulman.

Doris Climo donates her cooking ability to any Junior who is not afraid to boil water.

Cyril Harper passes on his lightning mathematical ability to Henry Patch.

Marjorie Ayer offers her quiet ways to Anita Monge.

Helene Schnurbush donates her ability to play basketball to Fannie Hovey with the hope that Fannie may make a basket once in a lifetime.

Irene Montague passes on her cleverness at dressmaking to Millicent Peabody so that Millicent may look like a fashion plate.

Florence Jillett gives her natural wave to Dorothy Green.

Bradford Baker donates his "smile that wins" to Horace Spiby.

Roger Burke passes on his talent of dealing with high horses and wooden bars to Edward Lobacz.

FIFTH: The Class of 1938 also makes the following general bequests:

TO ALL AFTERNOON PUPILS: a carload of eyeglasses, so that they can see to study during the long, winter afternoons.

TO THE TYPEWRITING PUPILS: new, adjustable chairs, so that little Arthur DeCecca and John McCarthy will not have to use the same equipment as six-footers like John Doherty and William Sparks.

TO THE GREENWOOD PUPILS: a shelter in front of the high school, so that they will not get drenched when it rains and freeze in the winter while waiting for the bus.

TO THE JUNIOR CLASS: our old shoes, with the hope that they will fit sufficiently well so that said Juniors can step in and fill our place.

TO THE SOPHOMORE CLASS: plenty of good stiff discipline to prevent its members from becoming "softies."

TO THE FRESHMAN CLASS: our four years of experience with the sincere hope that its members will profit from our errors and omissions.

LASTLY: We hereby nominate and appoint Mr. Charles J. Peterson, Principal, to be the executor of this our last will and testament, hereby revoking all former wills made by us.

IN WITNESS WHEREOF we have hereunto subscribed our names and set our seal this first day of June in the year of our Lord, One Thousand Nine Hundred and Thirty-eight.

Mrs. Elvira Cosman

Scene—Laboratory of the Scientist, Rukah, on the Planet Mars.

At rear is a large box-like machine, on the top of which is an opening.

Rukah stands over it adjusting various parts.

A messenger enters.

(Kenneth Lindsay) Rukah—"Do you wish to see me?"

(Fred Palmerino) Messenger—"I have a message for you from His Majesty, the ruler of Mars."

Rukah—"What is it?"

Messenger—"The Senior Class of Wakefield High School from the Planet Earth has sent their Prophecy Committee to the Planet Mars to consult you and see your laboratory. They have been received by His Majesty and are now awaiting an interview with you. Are you ready to see them?"

Rukah—"You may bring them in."

The group enters.

Rukah—"It is indeed a pleasure to welcome you and this fine group of young people."

(Mary Lazzaro) One of Group—"It is more than a pleasure for us to be received by so great a person as you. Allow me to congratulate you on being the first to establish communication between Mars and Earth by means of your powerful machine."

(Katherine Miller) One of group—"We are especially interested in inspecting your machine, Doctor Rukah, and learning more about it."

Doctor Rukah—"Be seated, and I will tell you some of the things that can be done by its powers. The machine is the result of years of study. We have known that there must be some way of establishing contact with you on the earth, but just how, has been the problem."

(Ralph Pratola) One of group—"We, too, were faced with the same puzzle."

Doctor Rukah—"Just how I have gained this contact I am not yet ready to reveal; but today in honor of your arrival on Mars, I am desirous of giving any demonstration these young people may wish."

Edith Taylor, (excitedly)—“I know what I would rather you would do than anything else.”

Rukah—“What, I pray you?”

Edith Taylor—“Would or could you, through the powers of your machine, give us prophetic insight into the future of members of this class?”

Rukah—“That will be very easy, but you must do as I say. Hand me the names of the members of the class on slips of paper and I will, with the aid of this machine, foretell the future of each one.”

George Tremblay—“Oh, how fortunate! I brought a list with me. Will these do?”

Rukah—“Indeed they will do nicely. Put the names into the machine and it will do the work in a few seconds, even as you watch it.”

Recollections of the Class of '63

(An Interview)

It has already been our privilege to commemorate, at our graduation, the seventy-fifth anniversary of the first class that was graduated from Wakefield High School, the Class of 1863. Wakefield, at that time, was known as South Reading. Mr. Elam Porter was principal and Miss Marion Sweetser the assisting instructor. The prescribed course of three years included such subjects as English, spelling, reading, Latin, French, arithmetic, history, and some astronomy. There was also a light course in gymnastics in which the girls were proud to be able to participate. Two of the twelve graduates are now living: Mrs. Mary Mansfield Marshall of Brighton and Mrs. Laura Eaton Keith of Wakefield. Recently it was our pleasure to visit Mrs. Keith, who in her own eager fashion commented on their school life and their interesting activities.

Mrs. Keith first told us that the high school was located in the old town hall, near the old Congregational Church. Its exact location would be about where the band stand is now.

"On the day that I completed grammar school, I returned home somewhat unhappy, for I did not wish to leave grammar school just so that I might enter High School. As soon as I was started, though, I enjoyed it; those were very happy days."

"What subject did you most enjoy, Mrs. Keith?", we asked.

"I don't remember exactly," she responded. "When one is ninety-two years of age, seventy-five years is a long span to remember, as you will realize when you are as old as I. All of my studies were pleasant. I think Latin might have been my favorite."

Concerning the methods of teaching Mrs. Keith revealed many interesting facts. "You know, we weren't allowed to talk French, but merely to read it. We had very little mathematics. Frequently there were some matches in spelling, and besides these there were matches in history dates. One pupil would give a date, and the corresponding incident would have to be supplied," she explained.

Next we were informed of the frequent visits of the School Trustees, as they were then called. They asked any questions they wished; these questions could concern any subject so that students could not possibly have previous preparation. Today we would consider such proceedings to be rather severe tests of the student's ability. One of the worst ordeals of such an occasion was to be confronted with two subjects on which to write an essay. It was necessary to choose one of the two topics and then write—on the spur of the moment! Mrs. Keith remembered that she was once called upon to read her essay. When she presented it to the examiner, who was a relative of hers, he said, "I can't read it, Laura, the writing is too small."

It was on a Saturday morning in April, 1863, that the twelve members of the graduating class were called together to be officially examined by the School Trustees in the presence of parents. (I wonder whether we would consider that last fact an advantage or a disadvantage). Lunches were carried so that the session might last the entire day. Besides the examinations, there was gymnasium work in appropriate costumes. It was on this day also that the graduating class presented Mr. Elam Porter with a dictionary, a token of their respect and appreciation of his guidance.

In reply to my queries concerning honor students, Mrs. Keith said "Yes, we had two honor students. Mrs. Mansfield was the valedictorian, and I was the salutatorian. We were very happy when the day came, and many parties and teas were held at the homes of the various graduates. Everybody participated in the graduation, for despite the exercises, each student was compelled to write a theme and then read it to the audience."

(Mrs. Keith and Mrs. Mansfield were speakers according to a graduation plan similar to that of ours.)

Before we left, Mrs. Keith had her diploma brought out for our inspection. It is about four times as large as ours, but it is similar in that it contains the names of the School Trustees. It also bears the following statement: "Laura Lou Eaton having been a member of the High School in South Reading for the term of three years and having completed the prescribed course of studies in this Institution is entitled by exemplary conduct and the faithful performance of this duty to this Diploma, April 29, 1863."

Mrs. Keith is proud to have been honored by our class. It is the second occasion on which she has been honored, for both Mrs. Marshall and she were present at the first assembly in the present building. After having acquired much information and many incidents which are too detailed to include in this account, we left Mrs. Keith. She extended her hearty and kind wishes for a happy graduation and success for every member of the Class of 1938.

THE BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL—OUR MUSIC HERITAGE

KATHARINE NUTT, Salutatorian

Friends of the Class of 1938:

In behalf of my classmates it is my privilege to welcome you upon this twofold occasion—the celebration of our graduation and the commemoration of the seventy-fifth anniversary of the first graduating class of Wakefield High School, which, in 1863, was located in old South Reading. Of the twelve graduates, two are living: Mrs. Mary Mansfield Marshall of Brighton and Mrs. Laura Eaton Keith of Wakefield. At the youthful age of ninety-two both women have contributed to this program by kindly giving us letters and interviews, detailed accounts of which will appear in our yearbook tomorrow. A few words concerning these eminent women and their classmates of long ago are appropriate at this time. The school session lasted throughout the day, and the students also attended a half day on Saturdays. Their subjects consisted of English, spelling, Latin, French translation, and history. The girls were permitted to participate in very light forms of gymnastics. Mr. Elam Porter, the Principal, and Miss Marion Sweetser were the only teachers the school possessed. Frequently, members of the school committee visited the classes; they compelled students to answer all types of questions without previous preparation. It is interesting to note that the two living members were the honor students, for Mrs. Marshall was valedictorian and Mrs. Keith was salutatorian.

Since that first graduating class represented a marked advancement in education in this district, we have deemed it fitting to choose as our theme of this program, "Our New England Heritage—The Noble Record of Man's Thoughts, His Deeds, His Dreams." Tonight I shall endeavor to reveal to you the means by which "man's dreams" have made the Berkshire Festival our heritage in music.

When our nation was young in prestige, the center of all her art was our own Boston; for here pioneers of every field assembled and advanced their beliefs. After a time, other cities wrested some commercial and political prestige from Boston; yet with customary New England vigor, we never failed to discriminate between the good and the bad or doubtful. In the mountains and valleys of Vermont, New Hampshire, and Maine, from the hills of Massachusetts to the narrow, stretching expanse of Cape Cod, in industrial Connecticut and Rhode Island lies the ineffaceable stamp of the noble ideals and lofty dreams of New Englanders, ideals sufficiently strong to create a force in individuals—the force to make their dreams abundant realities.

As an example of this force we find in our own Berkshires a small group—stalwart inheritors of the steadfastness typical of New England people. This group of individuals has created for us the essence of a great movement in American music—a movement which is expressive of our own New England heritage.

Acting upon the suggestion of our eminent Massachusetts composer, the late Henry Hadley, Miss Gertrude Robinson Smith and Mrs. Owen Johnson of Stockbridge endeavored to arouse interest in a Berkshire Symphonic Festival and to assemble a board of trustees which, however, was not incorporated according to law until 1935. It was in the previous summer, then, that the Berkshire Symphonic Festival, the most potential American movement ever to have been attempted in our music, had its somewhat unpretentious beginning. The praise for this, now an American institution, must be directed toward our own New England and to Massachusetts in particular.

The first year, the series of three concerts of which the Festival was comprised were held in a horseshoe ring in Stockbridge. Henry Hadley conducted the orchestra, composed of sixty-five members of the New York Philharmonic Symphony Orchestra. Approximately two thousand persons were in attendance at each concert. The deficit was slight, and enthusiasm was rising.

In 1935 the second Festival took place with Mr. Hadley again conducting; this time the orchestra consisted of men from various groups, but the resulting assembly was disappointing. Progress had been made in that the organization now possessed a huge tent as insurance against rain. The acoustics within the tent was reputed to be excellent. The 1935 deficit had increased to a rather alarming degree. It was for that reason that John C. Lynch, United States financier and resident of Stockbridge, and George Edman of the Berkshire Evening Eagle were first to express the constructive opinion that if the Festival were to continue—to say nothing of its being expanded—a unit orchestra certainly should be engaged. By communication on the part of these gentlemen with George Judd of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, the enthusiasm of Koussevitsky and the trustees was kindled to the extent that they agreed to participate in the 1936 series, or the third year of the Berkshire Symphonic Festival.

The progress, the expansion, the success of the Festival dates from the Boston Symphonic Orchestra's co-ordination with the former. Indeed, in 1936 it remained for our own Boston representatives to seize the Festival from its experimental period and steer it toward success, toward a promising, glorious future. Koussevitsky took his men to "Holmwood," the estate of Mrs. Margaret Emerson. It is noteworthy that the series was completed with no deficit whatsoever, probably the first time such a large out-of-door concert has even been accomplished without financial loss to the sponsors. The secret? Merely that the Festival now had an enthusiast whose very rank as a musician lent him the influence and the daring to determine a standard—a goal for the Berkshire Festivals-to-be.

The Berkshire Symphonic Festival is not to be confused with Mrs. Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge's annual concerts of chamber music, for hers was for some years known as the Berkshire Festival.

We may think of this woman's ventures as being the means by which cultural interest in western Massachusetts was kept alive—interest which was necessary before our present Berkshire Festival could come into being. Between the two enterprises are three essential differences. Mrs. Coolidge's present concerts are limited to personal friends, and are cosmopolitan in the musicians and composers employed. On the other hand, the Berkshire Festival offers all types of symphonic music, is open to the public, is distinctly American in aspect, and will develop to be more American. Herein, then, is the underlying difference.

It was in the months following the 1936 season that the momentous milestone in the Festival's history was reached. It was apparent to many that a permanent home for the Festival was necessary, but no definite attempts at securing one were then made. Many times in the past it has been evident that any ideal or project deserving of a place in the world has attained its permanence; so it was in this case. Mrs. Gorham Brooks, a resident of Brookline, with her aunt, Miss Mary Aspinwall Tappan, presented her country estate and childhood home to the organization. The estate is indeed a true home, for Mrs. Brooks' gift has rendered the Festival historical background and atmosphere that a young movement rarely possesses except after years of endeavor and success.

Let us review the "local color" of the Stockbridge and Lenox regions in order that we may realize the true heritage which is ours in this Berkshire Festival. Stockbridge has long been a district of cultural interests. The actresses, Charlotte Cushman and Fanny Kemble, lived there. Edith Wharton and the Sedgewicks had been associated with the district. William James, Melville, Emerson, and other prominent philosophers and socialists met there, for Stockbridge was in a real sense the autumn meeting place of the Concord School.

"Tanglewood," the name of the estate given by Mrs. Brooks, is located between Lenox and Stockbridge, and it possesses lovely scenic beauty not unlike that of Wordsworth's English lake country.

One might consider this rich cultural history to be sufficient in itself, but there is yet one more fact of great significance. On the Tappan estate, at the rear of the orchard was a tiny, rambling red farmhouse, and in that low structure once lived Nathaniel Hawthorne. During his sojourn there, spent in writing and in exploring the beautiful country nearby, Hawthorne wrote his House of the Seven Gables and the Tanglewood Tales, in honor of which Mr. Tappan named his estate "Tanglewood"—the name needs no explanation, for it is, as one would infer, significant of the natural splendor of the region. "Tanglewood", new home of the Berkshire Festival—a heritage indeed!

Last year during the fortnight of the Festival's duration, the guests, among whom were many distinguished personages as well as tourists and the native farmers, were at liberty to wander over the grounds of Tanglewood, and to see the bronze tablet near the south gate which commemorates Hawthorne's memory and the little red cottage which was destroyed by fire nearly a half century ago. It was not an infrequent occasion to encounter violinists "tuning up" in the flower beds or to see Dr. Koussevitsky's baton directing a rehearsal up in the hills. Mrs. Brooks herself was among those who encountered double bass players practicing in the stalls of the stable.

Last summer under Doctor Koussevitsky's supervision the series was expanded to include six concerts. Special trains from Boston and New York accommodated persons who did not wish to remain throughout the fortnight. The number who spent the two nights in the district, however, filled hotels and necessitated food concessions. All Stockbridge and surrounding towns had become conscious of the great activity; as a result all the autumn entertainments were held early for the benefit of the concertgoers. Olin Downes, music critic for the New York Times, gave lectures preceding the programs so that the composers and their works might be readily appreciated by the listeners. The programs themselves included the best works of such composers as Wagner, Beethoven, Tchaikowsky, Schubert, Franck, and several modern composers such as Stravinsky; however, there was a noticeable absence of Bach's works. A composition by Edward Burlingame Hill, a native of this state, had its first official performance at the second concert. The work, Sinfonietta for String Orchestra was praised highly.

Although the thunder-storms greatly embellished the playing of such compositions as Wagner's Ride of the Valkyries or cleared the air for a performance of Beethoven's Pastoral Symphony, in most cases participation of the natural elements was not appreciated; hence, Dr. Koussevitsky demanded that an adequate building in which to play be provided.

With enthusiasm typical of the progress of the Festival thus far, committees were soon obtaining money for a fund with which to build an amphitheater somewhat unceremoniously called "the music shed." The cost will be $100,000 and thus far over $80,000 has been obtained by gifts from $1 to $10,000. Equipped with a soundproof roof, open sides, and acoustics especially studied and arranged, the out-of-door concert hall will seat 5,000 and an additional 1,000 under the colonnades. The stage is to be only temporary so that whatever form the Festival's expansion may take, adequate means of presentation may be assured. The auditorium will not be completed in time for the series of next August, but it will be ready for use.

Without doubt the Festival will be enlarged in its scope. Dr. Koussevitsky would like to make it an academy for young American conductors who show unusual talent. It is his hope also that opera may be presented, and that the Greek tragedies may be revived. This August the Festival will last at least a fortnight, and besides the customary symphonic music the last acts of Wagner's Siegfried and Die Walkure will be presented with soloists. The Saint Cecilia Club of Boston will take part in a performance of Beethoven's Ninth Symphony. The dominant principle of the whole Berkshire Festival organization was stated by Koussevitsky who said, "We are not endeavoring to surpass Salzburg or the other great European festivals; we may rival them, but ours is to remain an American institution.

Miss Smith, the President of the organization, and her trustees are less definite than Boston's maestro concerning their plans for the future. As Mr. Edman, a member of the board expressed it, "We don't know exactly where we're going." From this remark, however, we are not to infer that the enterprise has no standards or ideals, but rather that their ideals are definite but many; hence it is difficult to discern what type of Today in New England as pioneers we look upon our latest venture. Its development has been rapid, but natural and practical. The Berkshire Festival is as deeply rooted as the mightiest elm; it is as American as the soil itself. Nobody who hears immortal music echoed by our New England Berkshire Hills fails to catch something of the wonder, the richness, and the staunchness of our living heritage in music.

A SCIENTIST IN EDUCATION

HELENE SCHNURBUSH, Honor Pupil

One of New England's most remarkable men of the modern day is James Bryant Conant, President of Harvard University. Conant, New England born and bred, is a real product of our New England heritage, and he has contributed greatly to the "rich record of man's thoughts, his deeds, his dreams."

He was born March 26, 1893, in the Dorchester section of Boston. He went to Roxbury Latin School instead of Groton or St. Mark's. Even as a boy he was intensely interested in chemistry. His father recognized this taste and built a small lean-to for him to use as a laboratory. Although he spent little time in sports, Conant played football and tennis.

He studied chemistry under the guidance of Professor Henry Black at Roxbury Latin School, where he prepared for Harvard. Jim Conant made his own way, earned his own living. His old teacher at Roxbury Latin, Professor Black, tells how once the tow-headed lad came to him with what he claimed was an induction coil, an empty chalk box containing a bolt wound with wire, and tied to an electric bell mechanism as a circuit-breaker. The boy couldn't get it going.

"You don't expect to make that go, do you, Jim?"

"I've got to, because father said he'd buy me a real induction coil if I did."

Today the lad who made that contraption work heads a $120,000,000 corporation.

In the fall of 1910, Conant entered Harvard, where he specialized in chemistry. He received an A.B. degree a year before the rest of his class, and spent his senior year in working for a steel company. After he had served for several seasons as an instructor in chemistry at Harvard, the war broke out and interrupted his academic life.

He became an officer in the army. On June 12, 1918, he discovered that the formerly priceless secret of G34, otherwise known as lewisite, the most deadly gas in existence, could be manufactured in a laboratory. Immediately he was sent to the Mousetrap. This was a factory which manufactured lewisite at Willoughby, Ohio. It was surrounded by high fences topped with barbed wire and patrolled day and night by troops. Once inside, a person could not get out for the duration of the war, because Uncle Sam didn't want the news of the new gas to spread around. There Conant was, younger than the man in command, yet a high ranking officer with the secret of the gas at his disposal. Cooped up with hundreds of others in close confinement, day after day, working at high pressure, sleeping in his office, always in the greatest danger, he was up against a serious problem. However, it was James Conant's broad administrative ability, his tact and good nature, his winning smile, his cool handling of difficulties and of human relationships which saved things, which welded all the various groups into an effective working body concentrated upon one end alone. He was not in charge, but he was the one most frequently consulted; he was the leader who got things done.

A few years later in 1921, the war had passed, and he became an instructor at Cambridge. In this year, he was married to Grace Thayer

Richards, the daughter of Professor Theodore Richards, his old chemistry professor. Soon after his marriage, he began to distinguish himself in chemistry.

Conant's eminence as a chemist is due to his pioneering instincts. His field is organic chemistry, which deals with those complicated compounds found in plant and animal life. Conant is one of the first organic specialists whose training was wholly American. He trained under his father-in-law, Theodore Richards, a Nobel Prize winner. He has what his associates call "scientific imagination," which means that he has the gift of intuitive guessing—he can peer ahead and see things.

President Conant is now forty-five years of age, but he looks much less than that. There's an extremely appealing and boyish air about him, probably because he is tall and thin. Years of work over malodorous sinks and test tubes have brought a permanent stoop to his shoulders. He is very well tailored now, a marked change from the baggy comfort of his chemistry days. He has deep blue eyes, a mass of blonde hair with a touch of gray, and a large mouth which can break into a warm, sincere, friendly smile. He has a well modulated voice, and he looks exactly what he is—a professor in a New England University. No poses, no pretenses, no affectation about him. He is an affable gentleman who has already learned the first trick of all major executives—to give the impression of leisure even when his day is most pressing, and he has fallen behind in his appointments. In finance he has the cool shrewdness of his New England upbringing, added to the natural keenness of the scientist. The new President of Harvard is simple, direct, modest, and unassuming, not in the least impressive or imposing. The outstanding characteristic of Conant, like all big men, is his simplicity.

The choice of Conant for the presidency of Harvard University was the work of the Harvard Corporation, the governing unit of the University which consists of the President and six Fellows. When President Lowell, in November, 1932, announced his retirement, the Corporation decided that each Fellow should make a list of possible successors. Prominent on each list was Conant's name. This was a surprise, for each had supposed that Conant was unknown to the others, except as an extraordinarily able chemist. They discovered, among major things, that Conant was regarded as an excellent administrator in the Chemistry Department; that he had a passion for first-rate mentalities and was more than a little intolerant of mediocrities; that he was, for a scientist, exceedingly well-read in literature, history, and economics. On one pretext or another, each Fellow called on him and returned an enthusiastic Conantite. By April they had reached their decision, and on the 9th of October, 1933, James Bryant Conant was inaugurated President of Harvard.

New England simplicity was particularly manifest in the service of his formal induction into this great office. The service was not the typical academic inauguration. The college "captains" and "kings" were not present. Salutations from other colleges were not offered. Addresses interpreting the higher education were not spoken. The service was a simple ceremonial of the plainest type. Its place was the historic Faculty Room whose walls are hung with portraits of the great Harvard men of the last hundred years. The service was a duplication of the formal induction of President Everett of the year 1707. The whole inauguration in atmos-where, in place, in every exercise was indicative of the simplicity of character and of the life of the new president and his New England heritage. In this simplicity are found the genuine humility of spirit and the modesty of manner which belong to him as a personal and administrative asset.

Few people realize the importance of being President of a large university. His tasks are many and varied, and at each he must excel. He really has five jobs in one. First, he must be a super-salesman. The modern college president sells his institution to the world-at-large. He must attract students, and he must obtain money to carry along, for no college pays its way by tuition or legislative grants alone. He must also be a financial expert. Today the endowment fund at Harvard, on the interest of which the university keeps alive, is $123,000,000, a sum which must be kept intact, wisely invested, carefully guarded. A super-salesman, a super-financier, he has to be a super-executive also. Harvard today has 1,600 officers of instruction, tutors, professors, deans, and others, as well as a maintenance force of 2,600. For the hiring and firing of this huge number, for the proper performance of their work, for selecting the right men for the right place, the President is responsible.

He must be a leader and an educator. Eight thousand young men at Cambridge, Massachusetts, look to this man for leadership and inspiration. Lastly, he has to be an administrator. He must co-ordinate the university into a smooth-running machine. He is responsible for the budget. Withal, he is an autocrat. The head of a corporation comparable to our greatest industrial concerns, his powers are greater far than those of the leaders of such concerns. He is answerable to no board of directors, he bothers with no dividends to stockholders, he deals only with the overseers, who often know little about the university and that through him alone.

Aside from these problems which confront Conant, he has two aims which he will try to realize. In the last decades of the last century and in the first decade of the present, Harvard enrolled as members of its faculties the greatest American scholars and teachers. In a single generation one recalls such names as James Russell Lowell, Louis Agassiz, Benjamin Peirce, Asa Gray, Wolcott Gibbs, Henry Adams, and many others of equal significance. These names represent a force of scholarship and of teaching unique in American college history. But in the more recent years has occurred a lamentable decline. The illustrious list has been devastated by death and by age. It will be the function of the new president to restore, if scholars can be found, this unique greatness. The service is a most difficult one; but it is as important for Harvard, and for the higher learning in the United States and the world, as it is difficult.

A second problem belonging to the new administration is the problem of the advancement of knowledge. To quote President Conant, "A desire to know more about the difficult sides of a question, a craving to understand something of the opinions of other people and other times, mark the educated man." He believes education is more than what you get out of books. For the new president this problem of advancement of knowledge is both timely and urgent. Yet whatever answer is given, it is clear the enlargement of the broad field of knowledge is to be achieved.

At present we know that Conant will bear to Harvard the virtue and the atmosphere of scholastic and administrative simplicity, a noble sense of reality, and an emphasis upon the fundamental elements of education.

A great chemist himself, he will contribute the directness in method and the effectiveness of the laboratory to the worth of the administrative office. In a word, simplicity will be the prevailing characteristic. The promise of an administration which will worthily follow the terms of his greatest predecessors is rich. To James Bryant Conant, education is the most valuable possession a person can have. He believes the youth of America needs to realize the value of education and the importance of knowing how to meet life today. In one of his most famous speeches, he presents this statement: "What we do need are citizens who will examine seriously and discuss vigorously the many difficult problems with which the times present us." And this is what he aims to produce in developing the bright potentialities of Harvard University.

CONTEMPORARY INTERPRETER OF NEW ENGLAND LIFE

ELIZABETH M. FANCK, Valedictorian

Our New England heritage is revealed with shrewd insight into the character of our progenitors by two Maine writers whose youthful lives were spent amid those surroundings of which we are so proud today. I speak of Mary Ellen Chase and Robert Tristram Coffin. Their subjects are treated differently, for persons of contrasting temperament vary in their interpretations of life. Miss Chase, in particular, dwells especially on the love of learning and the religious faith of our forefathers; whereas Mr. Coffin treats of the dignity and simplicity of life. Both writers impress us with the beauty of our New England heritage.

Mary Ellen Chase was born in Blue Hill, a small village on the Maine coast, in the late eighties. Her home life was similar to that of other children of her age in New England. She had her chores to do; the vegetable garden which fed the family in summer had to be cared for by some young weed-puller, and the baby's cradle had to be rocked. In the evening, her mother, busy with her darning, would hear Mary Ellen's lessons and those of her brothers and sisters; while her father, who was the village lawyer, would spend long hours in his library, deep in Homer or Plato, or the works of some eminent historian. However, he was interested in his children's progress and delighted in being surprised by the recitation of a chapter of the Bible or a few lines of Virgil, that one of his youngsters might have committed to memory at the mother's thoughtful suggestion. Miss Chase's formal education was gained from a district school which housed all the grades in two rooms, and later in the academy, which served the surrounding villages. She continued her training in the University of Maine, and, after graduation, went West to teach and study. She is in New England now as Head of the English Department at Smith College.

In an autobiography of her youth, Goodly Heritage, Miss Chase describes the pious observance of holy days of her own family and of her neighbors. Religion was not merely a matter of going to church once in a while. It was a regular weekly ritual, punctuated with devotional services during the week. The Sabbath began at sundown on Saturday and lasted until Phoebus had again drawn his golden chariot into the ocean. As little work as possible was undertaken; the dinner—the very antithesis of our Sunday chicken—was simply prepared from yesterday's left-overs. Sunday was truly a day of rest and devotion.

In her writings, Miss Chase makes clear that such religious feeling gave our New England forbears an appreciation of the significant in life. They realized the importance of an education, but they did not put intellect before character. The author's father was an intelligent man. He loved the classics and passed this love on to his children, but he realized that their value was not supreme. A stern Puritanism, "the Puritanism that cannot die, the Puritanism that made New England what it is, and is destined to make America what it should be," the conviction of our own James Russell Lowell, still remained in his soul. He knew the Bible thoroughly and expected his children to learn and practice its precepts. Miss Chase numbers reading and study among the chief pleasures of her childhood, but in her writings she emphasizes the point that she was never allowed to spend her time with Shakespeare or Thackeray at the expense of her other duties. A brilliant man was fortunate, but he must not flaunt his knowledge before his neighbors. Rather must he use it to the advantage of all. In one of her essays, Miss Chase writes that she was brought up in the belief that the name of the great Greek philosopher was pronounced "So-krats," because of the ignorance of her teacher in the village school. Her father, then the chairman of the School Board and a Greek scholar of note, would not destroy the confidence of his children in their teacher by correcting the error. Not until Miss Chase entered her high school years did she learn the real pronunciation. Such an understanding of true values that the author's father reveals was ably reflected in his daughter.

Notwithstanding, a love of learning was to be commended. Home libraries contained the masterpieces of the centuries—the works of Homer, Plato, Virgil, Shakespeare, Milton, and Bunyan. In more than one essay, Miss Chase reveals her own reading habits, and her novels show the literary tastes of her contemporaries. The character, Mary Peters, was a lover of good books and studied them diligently with a sea-captain friend who was not dead to the language of Homer.

However, with these facts of the cultural side of New England life gleaned from the works of Mary Ellen Chase, we cannot stop. There is another strain that enriches the writings of New England authors. It is the sea-fearing tradition which is still alive today. Silas Crockett, another novel also by Miss Chase, shows the courage and fortitude in the face of hardships that our forbears possessed. Doubtless she drew the material for her work from the tales often related by her grandmother of her own days at sea in her husband's ship. This same grandmother, Goodly Heritage reveals to us, had tales to tell of her observances in foreign ports. Her travels broadened her outlook and gave her the realization that New England customs were not suited to every corner of the world. We can exult in the possession of a heritage that made our progenitors tolerant.

Such an inheritance—of a Puritanic character and a knowledge of true values, of a love of learning, of a sea tradition with its banners of courage, and of an outlook broadened by experience in the world—which belongs to Mary Ellen Chase is also a part of Robert Tristram Coffin.

Mr. Coffin was born in Brunswick, Maine, in 1892. His boyhood was spent in and around Penobscot Bay on several farms which his father, at various times, owned. I will not dwell on his home life, for it was essentially the same as that of Miss Chase. His parents were fond of the classics and encouraged worthwhile reading tastes in their children. He received his education in his native town. After some time spent in France in the war and at Oxford University, where he held a Rhodes scholarship, he returned to America to teach at Wells College, New York. However, in 1934 he was appointed Pierce Professor of England at Bowdoin College, his Alma Mater, where he still resides.

In the book, Lost Paradise, an autobiography of the author's childhood, Mr. Coffin discloses a trait of New England character that the late Calvin Coolidge made familiar to us—reticence. When the boy, Peter, met his uncle after a long period of separation, there was little to be said. In the words of the gifted writer: "Uncle Thomas didn't say anything more. He just stood there and twinkled in his eyes. He wasn't the talking kind either . . . When they felt good, they didn't make any talk about it." Such relatives did not speak when there was no need for words. They did not spend their time in idle conversation. Surely this reserve is a noble inheritance.

Kennebec: Cradle of Americans, the story of the Maine countryside, told through the historic Kennebec River, reveals the frugality and independence of New Englanders. At the end of a season when money was low, wives scraped the wooden staves of the flour barrel and were sparing of other necessities which came from stores. Our ancestors were self-reliant; they would not depend upon the generosity of neighbor or shopkeeper. A dignified, simple, well-ordered life set up certain standards which did not include luxury or extravagance. Such thrift should be appreciated today.

In any discussion of Mr. Coffin's works, his Pulitzer Prize winning volume of poems, Strange Holiness, should not be omitted. The poems are simply expressed, with felicity of phrase as the dominant trait. The subjects are usually homely things with which Mr. Coffin was familiar in his childhood on the farm. His love of beauty is aptly illustrated in his description of an old pitcher of his mother's. He first paints it for us and then goes on to portray its deeper significance to him.

"But all that was a small, faint part
Of the forest in his heart
Those trees had always been beside him,
Those shy deer had always eyed him;
He could hear their slender feet
In behind his heart's quick beat
He would never get quite through
Those winding woods. It seemed he knew
Someone breathed behind the trees
Whose breath was the eternities."

The memory of this pitcher is indeed a rich heritage. Still, we must not stop with it. There is notable beauty and appreciation of trivial yet worthwhile things in another poem called "The Pines." The scene is laid behind a barn near a grove of stately pine trees. The poet, through the eyes of a boy of ten, sees a tremendous unity in all the beautiful things and feelings in his former surroundings, almost reverently and lovingly remembered.

"A duck's white feather like a flower
On a pool left by a shower . . .
The sudden smell of apples in October twilight from a bin."

The comprehension of simple beauty is a worthwhile power to pass on to us.

Robert Tristram Coffin, chiefly the poet, has disclosed in his works the ties and emotions of the New England people. He glorifies the commonplace, relates the hopes and fears of a people living on the banks of a great river, or reveals the thoughts and values of a small boy equally well. Together these writers give us a true conception of our New England life from the glowing past to the equally vital present. And we can say sincerely with the prophet, "The lines are fallen unto me in pleasant places, yea, I have a goodly heritage."

Classmates:

Tonight marks the ending of four glorious years and at the same time represents a new period of achievement to come. Our noble heritage should give us courage to fulfill the ideals of our New England forefathers. Our motto, Try, Trust, Triumph, should be a challenge to face life's problem bravely. As did that illustrious class of 1863, so must we, the Class of 1938, exemplify the lessons of character taught here. And, as we part, may our love of our Alma Mater serve always as a bond between us and Wakefield. May her memory ever be an inspiration. "Esto perpetua—May it last forever."

Class Poem

DEAR ALMA MATER

We repeat the old, old story
As we gather here tonight—
'Tis farewell and friendly parting,
But our hopes are high and bright.

At our parting there is sadness,
And adieu brings with it pain;
Yet with sorrow comes a gladness,
For new heights we would attain.

Still we know we cannot linger,
Others come to take our place;
So farewell, dear Alma Mater,
Time—our love will not efface.

Then as on life's road we travel,
We will pause and oft recall
Words of courage from our school days,
"Try, Trust, Triumph"—conquer all.

In the long run—
